Young Professionals Network (YPN)
The Young Professionals Network (YPN) of the Greater Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce is a professional development program designed to provide young professionals in the area with an insider’s view of the Greater Philadelphia business community. Members make valuable connections with peers from various industries and have access to the region’s most prominent and influential leaders.

YPN Event: “Unplugged” with Mayor Michael Nutter
When: Monday, April 13, 2009 @ 6:00pm to 8:00pm
Where: SJU - Mandeville Hall: Teletorium
What: YPN and SJU are pleased to present the second “Unplugged” event with Michael Nutter, Mayor of Philadelphia. Mayor Nutter will have a candid discussion with members of YPN about the state of the city and what YPN members and the business community can do to become more engaged in helping resolve the City’s fiscal crisis. The conversation will also include a dialogue on the factors that will make young professionals want to live, work, raise their families, and succeed in the Greater Philadelphia region. Feel free to come prepared with questions!

We are raffling free YPN memberships. If you would like your name to be considered, please contact us via email at sjumba@sju.edu, by calling 610-660-1690, or stopping by the Graduate Business Office in MV 284!

Note: Memberships will be valid through 12/31/09 or until winner’s graduation date, whichever comes sooner.

Career Development Center For Graduate Students

Graduate Internships Available

Smith Memorial Playground & Playhouse
Smith Memorial Playground & Playhouse seeks a graduate intern to create the collateral materials and public relations resources associated with Smith’s new strategic marketing plan. The intern will undertake the following projects which are vital to increasing Smith’s visibility in the Philadelphia area and beyond:

1. The creation of Smith’s general, rental, and membership brochures;
2. The development of Smith print and electronic press kits;
3. The formalization of Smith’s information description and its distribution to key tourism outlets, guide books, newspapers, etc.; and
4. The establishment of a photo resource library
5. The design of a social networking presence including MySpace and Facebook.

The ideal candidate will be a current graduate student and have a background in marketing and public relations, excellent written and verbal communication skills, the ability to work independently as well as with a team, and be comfortable working around children and their caregivers.

This position will be paid for the summer.
Please contact Kate Laepple Hertzog at kate@smithplayhouse.org with your resume.

Platform Advisors: June 8th – August 14th
Platform Advisors focuses on delivering full service strategic consulting services, including licensing, valuation, due diligence, and commercial brand strategy. They are looking for a candidate who is half way through the program and has experience in pharmaceuticals, healthcare or life sciences. Candidates must be highly analytical, and will assist the team with solving specific strategy and business problems. The internship is paid $10/hr. You must be able to stay the full length of the program as there is a final pitch presentation given to the SVPs and Managing Partners. Resumes can be sent to Brooke Popko at BPopko@SSCGGroup.com. For more information on this company, please reference their website: www.platformadvisors.com

Fundraiser: Business Cards

Do you have personal business cards to distribute during your upcoming interviews? If not, have them designed by SJU. Included in this card will be your name, MBA candidacy, expected year of graduation, previous degrees earned and contact information. The cost is 25$ for 100 business cards. Visit http://www.surveymonkey.com/s.aspx?sm=m3Da28r6D_2bVt8IK_2fkJWg_3d_3d to fill out your information and purchase your cards now! (You must type in entire address) Orders and payments due by April 17.

Top Ten Criteria To Perfect Your Resume
By: Catey Hill
Daily News Staff Reporter

What really matters to employers when they look at your resume? Below are the results from a survey of more than 500 leading recruiters, who were asked about executive-level and mid-level resumes. The survey was conducted by independent research firm ResearchNow and The Ladders.com. The following are the top ten resume criteria named by recruiters:

1. A strong area of expertise with solid experience to back it up.
2. Relevant industry experience that includes a solid track record of success.
3. Leadership experience.
4. A strong, succinct summary paragraph of one’s professional experience.
5. Education credentials including where one went to school and how they did when they were there.
6. An effective, well-organized resume that allows one to quickly skim and review the candidate’s qualifications quickly.
7. Quantifiable accomplishments and results that show how the candidate contributed to the bottom line.
8. Relevant technical and business skills such as certifications.
9. Tenure at a company. Job hopping is usually frowned upon.
10. Rather than a bulleted list of duties, candidate should summarize job descriptions with a focus on measurable results.

If you're launching an online job hunt for the first time in a while, take caution. What may look like an ad for employment may lead to something entirely different, like a hard sell for career services or job-training manuals. Or worse, it might be a plan by identity thieves to get you to share sensitive personal information via "phishing" expeditions. Some of the job postings—sometimes for positions long filled—also could be from recruiting agencies looking to collect résumés.

The ads to most watch out for are those pretending to offer a job but are really trying to get you to give up personal information, such as a bank-account or Social Security number. They often mimic real postings, with some featuring company names and logos nearly identical to those of actual employers. The individuals behind these postings may even exchange multiple emails with job hunters to build up trust.

So how can you tell if a job posting is insincere? One sign is that it lacks details about the hiring company and position, says Pam Dixon, executive director of the World Privacy Forum, a nonprofit group in Cardiff by the Sea, Calif., that specializes in privacy matters. Such an ad might describe an employer as a "major technology firm" rather than cite annual sales or say what kind of technology it produces. It also might offer a vague job description or list a salary range spanning more than $50,000. Genuine ads typically target applicants who have a specific amount of experience and pay salaries commensurate with their backgrounds, says Ms. Rigoli of the Fordyce Letter.

If you're unsure whether an ad is legitimate, you can do the following to protect your identity:
1. Respond to a company with a P.O. Box address instead of your home address.
2. List only your initials in the document. Don't use your full name.
3. Use a disposable email address to prevent spam from clogging up the one you normally use.
4. If you're unfamiliar with the company, check it out on the internet and the Better Business Bureau at bbb.org.
