Honor Societies

Founded in Philadelphia by the Society of Jesus in 1851, Saint Joseph's University is one of just 142 schools nationwide with a Phi Beta Kappa chapter and AACSB business school accreditation.

Phi Beta Kappa is the country's oldest and most prestigious undergraduate honors organization. Each school is required to present evidence that its educational program and academic environment "effectively quicken the mind and spirit of its students and faculty by encouraging the full development of their human capacities. Phi Beta Kappa requires that its member institutions give primary emphasis to curricula liberal in character and purpose and that courses distinguished by these qualities shall constitute the principal requirements for the bachelor's degree."

AACSB International – The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business is the premier accrediting agency for bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degree programs in business administration and accounting throughout the world. AACSB International is devoted to the promotion and improvement of higher education in business administration and management.

Distinguished achievement is also recognized by admission to Alpha Sigma Nu, national Jesuit honor society. The Society was founded in 1915 at Marquette University to honor a select number of students each year on the basis of scholarship, loyalty and service. The name of Alpha Sigma Nu signifies the Greek words Adelphotos Skolastikon Nikephoron (company of honor students). At Saint Joseph's University, juniors and seniors who rank in the top 15% of their classes and have a QPA of at least 3.5 may apply for membership.

There is also an academic honor society for University College students, Alpha Sigma Lambda. This national society was founded in 1945 at Northwestern University. There are chapters across the United States, including nine in Jesuit colleges.

Achievement is also recognized through the following discipline specific national honor societies:
